

The Thinkery

Natasha Robinson presents:

Female Education in the Age of One Child Families

Thirty-five years after the introduction of China's Family Planning Policy Western commentators remain critical of its effects on women. But are these criticisms still as valid as they once were?

Informed by ethnographic fieldwork in rural Shanxi Province, Natasha Robinson looks at how the lives of Chinese women are changing in the absence of siblings and explores what this means for China's modernization.

Natasha Robinson is an anthropologist and visiting researcher at Fudan University.

Tuesday April 1st
7:30pm
@ Grub and Groove

How to find us:

Bldg 2, 283 Jianguo Xi Lu, near Jiashan Lu
建国西路283号, 尚街X楼, 近嘉善路
Nearest subway stop: Jiashan Road (line 9)

