

Xi Jinping's International Strategy and Its Regional Implications

Dr. Zhang Zhexin (Tiger Zhang)

Shanghai Institute of International Studies (SIIS)

The basic elements of China's international strategy have taken full shape since Xi Jinping took power 3 years ago. Amid worries and expectations of the international society from an ever more confident and assertive China, sober thinking is needed on how China under the new leadership differs from the past and what impact it will exert on the existing world and regional order. Put simply, does a strong and assertive China mean more opportunity or challenge to other Asia-Pacific nations?
