Tocqueville noted that every political dispute in America winds up in court. This statement reveals the secret to American stability. This lecture will provide a broad sweep of American legal history to demonstrate that America's unique rule of law has prevented revolution and has (mostly) prevented severe civil unrest. While America's story is its own, an appreciation of the power of the rule of law may be helpful to other nations.

Ezra Mitchell is Professor of Law at Shanghai University of Finance and Economics. He is a legal scholar and the author of many papers and books, among them the award-winning The Speculation Economy: How Finance Triumphed Over Industry, Corporate Irresponsibility (2007), and Stacked Deck: A Story of Selfishness in America (1998). A graduate of Williams College and Columbia University Law School, he taught for many years at George Washington University, and served as Dean at Case Western University.

Hopkins China Forum events are organized under the auspices of The Johns Hopkins University and its alumni associations worldwide. For more information, please contact Frank Tsai of the Hopkins Club of Shanghai at editor@shanghai-review.org.
