China's financial system is the engine that drives its economic growth. How it works has always been a mystery. The presentation will survey the key issues which have shaped its development and explore the implications for China's integration into the international system. The target audience is the non-finance practitioner looking to gain a working knowledge of China's financial system trajectory.

Han Lin is Deputy General Manager of Wells Fargo in China, and a Senior Relationship Manager. In his role, Han advises Wells Fargo corporate and commercial customers on their U.S-China crossborder strategic financing and trade needs. Han began his career with Wells Fargo in 2004 in Charlotte, N.C. where he was involved in a series of strategic initiatives encompassing credit, payments, trade and acquisitions. Two years later, he moved to China where he has been ever since. Prior to banking, Han served in the U.S. Marine Corps, and also served as a Peace Corps volunteer in Ukraine. Han completed his undergraduate studies in business at the University of Michigan. He later completed a Masters in International Studies at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), a Masters of Science in Global Finance from the joint NYU Stern Business School - Hong Kong University of Science and Technology program, and a law degree (LLM) in Chinese Commercial Law at Fudan University Law School. Han serves on the Board of Governors of the American Chamber of Commerce in Shanghai. He is also a lecturer for the masters in Global Finance program at NYU. Han has lived in Shanghai for 14 years and is married with two daughters.

China Crossroads hosts talks on all topics related to China, including business, foreign policy, and other areas as they relate to China, the idea being that China is both already a "crossroads" of the world and itself at a "crossroads" in terms of its future global influence.
