AmCham Shanghai's annual China Business Report is based on a survey of member companies and provides insight into the business environment in China. Conducted annually for over twenty years, the AmCham Shanghai business climate survey is among the most authoritative gauges of multinational business sentiment in China, covering performance, strategy, and topical issues (e.g. U.S.-China Trade War and Covid-19 this year).

Ian Driscoll is the Publications and Communications Director at the American Chamber of Commerce in Shanghai. Ian previously worked at Reuters, where he was one of the New York reporting team that covered 9/11. His freelance writing has appeared in the Weekend Financial Times, Financial Times, the Toronto Star, Daily Telegraph, Global Capital, etc. Among many other things, he wrote about China's financial system, reform of the state-owned sector, art as collateral, and the market for Chinese contemporary art. In a very different life, he spent a year working on sheep and cattle stations in the Australian outback. He holds a master's degree from Columbia University, where he concentrated in East Asian studies.

China Crossroads hosts talks on all topics related to China, including business, foreign policy, and other areas as they relate to China, the idea being that China is both already a "crossroads" of the world and itself at a "crossroads" in terms of its future global influence.
