

CHINA CROSSROADS

Saturday, January 2nd, 2021, 16:00 – 17:30

China's Green Religion: Daoism's Role in a Global Ecological Civilization

James Miller

Associate Dean

Professor of Humanities

Duke Kunshan University

Author of China's Green Religion

Supported by:
Royal Asiatic Society
Green Initiatives

Wooden Box | 9 Qinghai Lu close to Nanjing Xi Lu
150rmb including drink ticket | FREE for members
RSVP to Frank Tsai at editor@shanghai-review.org

Modernity, originating in the European Enlightenment, has brought freedom and wealth to billions across the world, but has done so on the basis of the destruction of our sole planetary home. The world urgently needs a new ecological civilization based on the worldview that human flourishing is possible only in the context of the ecological flourishing of our planet. Does Daoism (Taoism), China's indigenous religious system, have a role to play in constructing a global ecological civilization?

James Miller is Professor of Humanities at Duke Kunshan University, where he also serves as Associate Dean for Interdisciplinary Strategy and Co-Director of the Planetary Ethics and Artificial Intelligence Lab (PETAL). He has published six books and numerous articles on Daoism, with a focus on its relevance for environmental ethics and ecological systems, including China's Green Religion: Daoism and the Quest for a Sustainable Future. Miller received his PhD in Religion from Boston University.

China Crossroads hosts talks on all topics related to China, including business, foreign policy, and other areas as they relate to China, the idea being that China is both already a "crossroads" of the world and itself at a "crossroads" in terms of its future global influence. For more information, contact Frank Tsai at editor@shanghai-review.org.