China has recently embarked on an ambitious data privacy and cybersecurity program, with wide-ranging implications for how businesses manage technology and information. Join Carly and Nate as they discuss the relevant aspects of this program for MNCS, the on-the-ground issues they face as a result, and the next direction of China's evolving data and cyber framework.

Carly Ramsey is Director of Political and Regulatory Risk at Control Risks in Shanghai, where she leads Control Risks' political risk, government affairs, and stakeholder engagement practice for China and Northeast Asia. She specializes in the risks facing business stemming from China's data privacy and cybersecurity regulatory regime. Prior to joining Control Risks, Carly was with APCO Worldwide in Beijing where she provided advisory, government relations, and corporate communications strategies to major multinationals, trade associations, and governments.

Nathaniel Rushforth is Cybersecurity and Data Law Counsel at DaWo Law Firm. He has a background in Computer Science and Engineering and 10 years of public and private legal experience, the last 4 of which in Shanghai. Prior to entering legal practice, he had worked in software design and cybersecurity for a large multinational, a startup, and the U.S. Government. At his current position at DaWo Law Firm, he brings this expertise to bear while helping clients navigate the evolving cybersecurity compliance and data protection landscape both in China and worldwide.

China Crossroads hosts talks on all topics related to China, including business, foreign policy, and other areas as they relate to China, the idea being that China is both already a "crossroads" of the world and itself at a "crossroads" in terms of its future global influence.
