AI will have a profound disruptive impact on society, and academia is no exception. With generative AI, the existing transformational trend will be further accelerated in the near future. In this session, we take a look at how AI will shape the future of education, as well as the way we pursue teaching and learning at a fundamental level.

Martin Lockstrom is a Senior Associate Professor of Operations Management at Xi'an Jiaotong-Liverpool University in Suzhou, China, where he is teaching and doing research in the areas of purchasing, logistics and supply chain/operations management. Dr. Lockstrom received his BSc/MSc in Industrial Engineering and Management at Chalmers University of Technology and his PhD in Operations Management from European Business School, Germany. He has previously taught graduate courses at European Business School, Moscow State University, Tongji University and MBA courses at CEIBS. He has published more than 50 academic and practice-oriented papers and book chapters, and made more than 60 conference appearances. Dr. Lockstrom has more than a decade of consulting experience working with multinational corporations such as BMW, Atlas Copco, DuPont, EY, among others.

China Crossroads hosts talks on all topics related to China, including business, foreign policy, and other areas as they relate to China, the idea being that China is both already a "crossroads" of the world and itself at a "crossroads" in terms of its future global influence.
