Using a Chinese conceptualization of social capital, informal interviews, and two decades of official data, Professor Eisenman explains how and why the CCP is building relationships with African political elites. His book, China's Relations with Africa: A New Era of Strategic Engagement (2023) with Ambassador David H. Shinn, explains how China builds relations with African countries to advance its larger geostrategy.

Joshua Eisenman is Associate Professor of Politics in the Keough School of Global Affairs at the University of Notre Dame. He also is a fellow of the Keough School's Liu Institute for Asia and Asian Studies, Kellogg Institute for International Studies, and Pulte Institute for Global Development. His research focuses on the political economy of China's development and foreign relations with the United States and the Global South —particularly Africa. His latest book, China's Relations with Africa: A New Era of Strategic Engagement (2023) with Ambassador David H. Shinn, examines the full scope of political and security relations between China and Africa. It explains the tactics and methods that China uses to build relations with African countries and contextualizes and interprets them within Beijing's larger geostrategy. The book is a follow-up to China and Africa: A Century of Engagement (2012), which was named one of the "Best International Relations Books of 2012" by Foreign Affairs. Professor Eisenman holds a PhD in Political science from UCLA, an MA in International Relations from Johns Hopkins University's Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies where he studied at the Hopkins-Nanjing Center, and BA in East Asian Studies from the George Washington University's Elliott School of International Affairs.

China Crossroads hosts talks on all topics related to China, including business, foreign policy, and other areas as they relate to China, the idea being that China is both already a "crossroads" of the world and itself at a "crossroads" in terms of its future global influence.
